

INTRODUCING mmemployees

With an economic crisis looming and companies being advised to 'batten down the hatches', claiming a number of permanent jobs across the Northern Beaches and threatening many more, the employment trend is starting to move towards temporary labour. Already the increase in temporary jobs is being seen as companies are unable and unwilling to commit to long-term employee expense.

Back in July, Mitchell Morley Employment saw the potential for a new temporary division based on the "it's all about me" philosophy, having been operating mainly in the permanent market until that time. Since July we've seen hundreds of positions and great candidates through the doors, all by just word-of-mouth referral. Now we feel is the time to open the doors fully and introduce the answer to your financial worries ...

(August 2008)

The Federal Government has advised that Australia's overall unemployment rate is expected to rise to 5 per cent by June next year, from a previous forecast of 4.75 per cent. The unemployment rate is expected to rise to 5.75 per cent by June 2010. Treasurer Wayne Swan said that weaker global growth would impact particularly on Australian jobs.

"Had we not acted decisively, economic growth would have been much weaker than currently forecast, with all of the flow on impacts on employment."

A sense of humor is part of the art of leadership, of getting along with people, of getting things done.

THINK BEFORE YOU SEND !

Most of us use email at work, but few consider how a poor email might land us in hot water. Email is a form of communication that leaves plenty of room for misinterpretation and misunderstanding. As only 7 per cent of our communication is actually the words we use, is it any wonder then that relationships can go so wrong over email? Without the benefit of body language and tone of voice there are instances where a perfectly simple communication can seem terse and even nasty. We so often offend without realising or we're misinterpreted. Email may be instant, but it's a work piece and should be kept professional. Here are a couple of tips to help you do just that:

- > 'Think' before you 'send'
- > Be friendly to avoid misinterpretation
- > Avoid content that is not straightforward
